

Alvin Ho: Allergic to Girls, School, and Other Scary Things

view in catalog

Alvin Ho is afraid of many things including, but not limited to elevators, tunnels, bridges, thunder, substitute teachers, scary movies, shots, and school. Most of all...school. Descended from a long line of Chinese farmer-warriors he loves to run around his house as a noisy superhero called Firecracker Man in a costume his gungung (that's grandfather) made, complete with a spaghetti drainer on his head. School takes too much of his energy so he is only Firecracker Man on weekends and holidays. It takes a lot of energy for Alvin to make it onto the bus and into the school building. Once he is there he can't think, read, smile, sing, or even scream. Worst of all, Alvin can't talk at school. In spite of his mutism, Alvin is determined to make friends with the help of a list of rules suggested by his brother, Calvin.

Even though Alvin has trouble communicating, he is smart enough to devise strategies for survival. One of those strategies is his PDK or Personal Disaster Kit. It is packed with things that are useful in an emergency. Here is a short list:

A whistle - In case he loses his voice, a whistle would be handy.

A three-leaf clover (because he couldn't find a four-leaf one).

Garlic. For fending off vampires and teachers.

A scary mask. For keeping girls away.

This is a very short list of the creative tools this sensitive second grader uses to manage his life. You will find the whole list and much more when you read Alvin Ho: Allergic to Girls, School, and Other Scary Things by Lenore Look.

Recommended for readers in grades 3-5.

Posted by Mary F. on January 27, 2012

Oh, the Thinks You Can Think

Fiction

Alvin Ho Allergic to Girls, School, and Other Scary Things

---