

Data Privacy Day

data-privacy-day.png

In light of the numerous cybersecurity incidents of 2017, on this year's Data Privacy Day it seems all the more important that we examine our privacy habits and best practices for staying safe online. Data Privacy Day is run by the National Cyber Security Alliance (NCSA), and serves as a platform for raising awareness about the importance of privacy and good online safety habits for people and businesses.

So while you may not be gearing up for too many Data Privacy Day celebrations, you'll at least want to take a look today at the NCSA's Online Safety Basics page for tips from the cyberpros. And keep an eye out for upcoming cybersecurity workshops in the Ground Floor or ask Library staff about resources and tools any time.

Posted by Sam O. on January 28, 2018

Teens

Information, Answers & Reviews
